Battle of Blountville Civil War Military Park

TN State Representative Tony Shipley spearheaded the move to establish a Civil War Park commemorating the Battle of Blountville. The Battle of Blountville Civil War Park and its development will primarily begin in the Historic District of downtown Blountville as recognized on the National Register of Historic Sites.

The Battle of Blountville Sept. 22, 1863

Three major factors made Blountville a Union prize to be destroyed:

- First, its proximity to the railroad connecting the East coast.
- Second, it was home of Matthew Haynes, who was holding seized property rights of Union sympathizers.
- Third, a tannery located on the banks of the Muddy Creek furnished the saddles for Mosby's raiders, a Confederate Brigade of cavalrymen who looted Union sympathizers.

On September 22, 1863, Federal forces advanced from Knoxville and occupied the cemetery overlooking the west side of town. Reacting to the threats, Southern forces formed artillery on a knoll near the present-day Blountville Middle School. For four hours, the battle raged when Union forces dislodged the Confederates who began a withdrawal to present-day Bluff City. The Confederates' withdrawal was a pre-planned surprise counter-attack, with fresh Confederate troops awaiting the pursuing Federals. The Union forces discovered the Confederate plot and turned back.
